PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Learn from one another!

One of the greatest potential benefits of NCPA membership is the incredible range of experience and knowledge of our individual members. There is so much to learn if we just listen to one another, and put some of the ideas we hear into practice.

Frances Kakugawa, one of our most experienced and professional members, shared a simple tip at a recent lunch meeting that has had a profound effect on me: She said contacting other writers has been a wonderful source of opportunities and learning for her.

I'd long thought of emailing well-known authors that I admire, but somehow just didn't get around to it. Finally, encouraged by Frances' advice, I sent out two emails. The first was to Florence Osmund, who has been writing for many years, and has an absolutely dynamite website! Her email was fast and friendly, very personable.

Florence very kindly gave me permission to share whatever I want from her site with our members, complimented our NCPA website, and offered to write an article for our site on any subject we'd like. I subscribed to her site, and encourage others to check it out as well.

Even if you don't subscribe, you'll be entertained for sure. Here is a link to one of her pages, "Writing Advice from the Experts" which has good advice, and definitely shows her sense of humor.

The second person I emailed is a personal icon for me. Richard Bach, author of Jonathan Livingston Seagull, has sold more than 60 million books around the world. My personal favorite is Illusions: The Adventures of a Reluctant Messiah, but I've read everything he's written. Heart in mouth, I sent a short email, and nearly had a heart attack when he replied within a couple of hours.

Here is what he said:

Ssshhhh… Just reading “From Hindsight to Insight” (Sharon’s book)
Oh. Thank you for those kind words for the books. I have this sense that I’m going to love yours, too.
Richard

Can you believe it? Richard Bach reading my words? I was absolutely floating for days. Now I just hope he likes it, but no matter, I'm still thrilled.

Thank you, Frances, without your advice who knows if I'd ever had gotten the courage to contact my idol!

Sharon Darrow, NCPA President

LETTER FROM 2015 $1,000 NCPA SCHOLARSHIP WINNER Tia Jenkins

Aug 17 at 10:21 AM ~ After her 1st year at Dublin U in Ireland

School is going really great so far! I survived my first year in Ireland and will be going back in about a month to start my second year. It has definitely been a learning experience seeing as I knew next to no one over there, but in the last year I have made so many lasting friendships and it is wonderful.

The $1,000 (scholarship) definitely helped pay my tuition and allowed me to breathe easier while traveling to other countries. Last Christmas I was able to visit 6 different cities with my lovely boyfriend because we found such great deals on flights and living quarters. It was pretty amazing.

This year I will be focusing even more closely on my main course of study, English and Economics, which I’m really excited about. This year we get to start specializing in the type of English Literature we want to learn and I’ve chosen to focus on modern American Literature, Romanticism, and 20th Century Drama. I’m hoping it’ll be a good year.

Thank you again ..... Tia Jenkins

NYT best-selling author Brenda NOVAK
Kick-Starts 2017 Scholarship Silent Auction

Award-Winning Author Brenda Novak kicks off our 2017 Scholarship Silent Auction (SA) donation-gathering with a bang! Brenda has donated her signature classy tote, plus the entire 8-book-set, signed, of her Whiskey Creek Series ~ $100 Value ~ Thank you Brenda!

(2017 BOOK Awards Banquet ~ Sun 23 April ~ Cherry Island Golf Course Elverta CA)

Don’t think you have anything to donate to the Scholarship Silent Auction? An example of what the following NCPA members donated to the 2016 SA:

- Even though she couldn’t attend, Cindy Sample … cindysamplebooks.com … sent cash
- Pam Suwinsky (Thalia Publishing Company  www.linkedin.com/pub/pam-suwinsky/10/889/381 ) provided 8 hours of professional developmental editing, copyediting, or consulting services.
- Danna Wilberg  www.Dannawilberg.com made, and brought her chocolate covered strawberries for the second year in a row, for a very popular On-the-Spot Live-Auction.
- We’re also looking for sponsors to assist in expenses for the 2017 Awards Banquet. The following NCPA members were sponsors for 2016:
  - Azevedo Print & Design, a division of MKE Creative ~ 2601Wright St. Sacramento, CA (916) 849-9819 June@AzevedoPrintAndDesign.com DISCOUNTED PROGRAM
  - Travel ID Cards, Sharon Darrow 916-803-1665, 800-462-2328 www.travel-idcard.com sharon@travel-idcard.com ~ DISCOUNTED BADGES

NCPA Guest Speaker and new member, Author & Literary Attorney Susan Spann, has offered another basket of books & special goodies from her upcoming trip to Japan, for the 2017 NCPA Awards Banquet. This will be her second year for donating a basket. Thank you Susan!

NCPA member Frances Fuller, author of “In Borrowed Houses”, invites you to join her and Sallie Reynolds, author of “Virginia Primitive” 12 Noon – 2pm Sat 27 Aug at the Georgetown Library, 6680 Orleans St, Georgetown for Reading & Writing to Cross the Barriers

Each will use her own book to talk about living with diversity: Sallie in the national scene, Frances in the international, and the public will be able to participate in discussions about how concerned citizens can learn to deal with their own biases and contribute to peaceful relationships. Concerns of both readers and writers will be addressed in the program

“In Borrowed Houses” is a memoir set in Lebanon during that country’s long civil war; “Virginia Primitive” is a fictionalized personal experience of racism in the southern U.S.

Danna Wilberg’s short film script, “Afternoon Delight” was chosen for this year’s "A Place Called Sacramento” film festival premiering at the Crest Theater on October 8, at 7:00 pm. "When love is in the air...some things are best kept secret." $12 Tickets for the festival are available online or at the Crest Box Office. <dannasjourney@sbcglobal.net>

NCPA Secretary Tom Kando announces some of his recent writing contributions to the photographic books of his very talented mother, Ata Kando:

Tom reports he “invented the story and wrote the text (originally in French, at age 16, then in Dutch and finally in English) of one of her well-known books - Dream in the Forest (1957, 2013).” More recently, he also wrote the text of a pictorial book titled Little Workers (2015) and this year (2016) wrote an introduction to In Honor of Ata Kando, the book which accompanies a major exhibition of Ata’s in the Netherlands.” (continued on next page)
On 17 Sep 2016, Ata Kando will turn 103, and the date coincides with the OPENING of a major exhibition of her work at the ROTTERDAM MUSEUM in the Netherlands.

Ata is Dutch, lives in Holland, and is one of Europe’s most prominent photographers. Her books, articles, exhibitions and media appearances are innumerable. They span the globe and eighty years of world history. For more information, click on her website: www.atakando.com or on her name Ata Kando (Google/Wikipedia).

Ata’s work documents World War Two, the Hungarian aborigines (tribes which she was deep in the Amazon), whale fairy-tale-like fantasies, and and dozens of countries. Her included world-famous war French photographer Cartier the Magnum Studio in Paris. continued to publish books and entered the second century of Amazingly, Ata has photos in magazines AFTER she her life. Over the past dozen years, she has published four books consisting of work never previously published, and two new editions of previously published books.

Tom states: “I am privileged not only to be her son, but also to have contributed to some of her projects.” www.tomkando.com european-americanblog.blogspot.com

PACHOLIK’S NIGHT FLARES’ FINALIST IN NATIONAL SELF-PUBLISHING TRIFECTA

Robert M. Pacholik, author of NIGHT FLARES: Six Tales of the Vietnam War, received word his Bronze Medal winning short-story collection is among the finalists in not one, or two, but three separate national Self-Publishing Book competitions.

Pacholik, who writes military action-adventure and military history fiction, was notified that his prize-winning hybrid story collection is in the final running for the: 2017 Independent Publisher Book Awards, The 2017 eLIT Book Awards, and the 24th Annual Writer’s Digest Self-Published Book Award.

The 21st annual Independent Publisher Book Award (IPPY) recognized in global book shows, library and indie bookstore distribution, plus national media outlets. IPPY draws publishers and from around the world, who compete in five-dozen categories for Silver, and Bronze Medals.

The 2017 eLIT Book Awards is a global e-book award for language books designed to distribute worldwide. Authors compete multiple categories and judges are drawn from book publishing, design, reviewers, and library science experts. Winners receive Gold, Silver, or Bronze Medals.

The Writer’s Digest Self Published Book Award is among the most prestigious, and longest running Self-published book competitions. Authors compete in nine categories, including literary fiction and mainstream fiction. Grand prize winners will receive an $8,000 cash prize, be featured on Writer’s Digest websites, and be invited to attend The Writer’s Digest Self-Publishing Book Conference, with all expenses paid.

EVERYTHING IS A NEW LEARNING EXPERIENCE  ~ Ron Javor

One of the things I’ve learned in the two-plus years that I’ve been writing children’s books is that, like all the other writing I’ve done professionally for 40 years (as an attorney), everything is a new learning experience!

Legal writing—whether contracts, briefs, or chapters in legal books—always requires research and care. As a fiction reader, especially history or science fiction, I’ve always been the picky kind of person who notices errors in chronology, technical matters, or descriptions. Children’s books are no different!

My first four books, in a series casually dubbed “Homes and Hopes”, are intended to be opportunities for “learning moments” as well as entertainment. They all deal with issues related to homelessness or finding better homes: one is a Habitat-like experience for a family building their new home (something else I’ve done in the past).

Since I volunteer extensively with homeless and badly-housed people, and worked professionally on housing issues, these were easy to write from my own experiences. My just-published “Sam and Sue’s Space Adventure” is about a boy with a disability taking a trip through and out of the solar system, another dream of mine (I was a biochemistry major in college, intending to be an astronaut).

The planets he and Sue visit (in order after Venus and Mercury), and the star systems described realistically, after significant “refresher” research.

Of course, my illustrator also had to do the is red, the asteroids (not meteors!) look like large specific angle, and the constellations have the

Sam and his dog Sue have a great time in their spaceship, looking through windows and moving around without gravity, just like any child would want to do on a space journey! There are several surprises at the end. One is that Sam is awakened and transfers from his bed to a wheelchair in order to get breakfast (and Sue is no longer a carefree space companion, but wearing her service dog outfit). We also don’t really know whether Sam was living his dream or dreaming his life; that’s up to the reader, parents and children.

All of my books end with a page of information about the book’s topic, an additional opportunity for teaching. In this case, after more research, I listed a number of famous people who have disabilities. We all know that Franklin Roosevelt had polio and used a wheelchair, and that Helen Keller was blind, but I’d never realized, even after seeing Itzhak Perlman play many times, that he never stands—he uses a wheelchair—or that my science fiction idol, Arthur C. Clarke, also relied on a wheelchair. They both had earlier bouts with polio.

The moral? I guess I’ll never stop having opportunities to learn new things, no matter what I’m writing about!  ~ Ronald Javor  ronaldjavorbooks.
ARE YOU A WRITER? ~ Elva Anson

Our first child was born in the sixties’ and I quit teaching to stay home with my children during their preschool years. At last, I had an opportunity to learn how to write and sell magazine articles. Dwayne Newomb taught a class on “Writing to American River College. Along with Bud Gardner, Yvonne Horn, Jean and other beginners who became successful writers, I signed up for his class. One of the first things I learned from Dwayne: “If you write, you are a writer even if you have not yet sold anything. Identify yourself as a writer.” Dwayne made his living writing and had become the local writing guru. He also encouraged us to form critique groups and join California Writers’ Club.

I joined a group of talented writers. We met regularly in each other’s’ homes. The only fiction writer in the group was Evelyn who wrote with the name Evelyn Swift. Much later, Ken Umbach published two of her books.

My first sale, “I Was a Speed Freak” an as-told-to piece, was to Listen Magazine. I had interviewed the young man in the story at the Aquarian Effort, a Sacramento rehab center. A few weeks later I sold an article about the Aquarian Effort. Years later, Listen Magazine solicited an article from me on boredom in teenagers. When that happened, I felt like I had come full circle.
